

Copyright and proprietary right

The BAADER websites, their design, texts, pictures, graphic elements, databases, animation files and downloads of any kind (summarised as "content) are protected by copyright. The websites or parts thereof must not be duplicated, changed, downloaded or used on any other websites, unless BAADER tells the user to proceed otherwise or consents to duplication or use in writing or by eMail. BAADER reserves all rights, in particular copyright, competition and proprietary right claims arising from the illicit use of the BAADER websites or parts thereof together with the registered trademarks.

Content

The BAADER websites are for the purpose of information only. The description of products is no substitute for studying the instructions for use. All information and content on the BAADER websites is non-committal, in particular the instructions for use. Only the instructions for use enclosed with the products should be heeded. Know-how contained in the reports is subject to on-going change through research and development. Although the authors have taken great care to ensure that the information in particular referring to applications and effects corresponds to the current state of knowledge at the time of first publication of the reports, this does not release you from the obligation to take your own decisions in your own responsibility.

BAADER assumes no liability for the completeness and correctness of the information and content on the BAADER website, unless BAADER has reached other explicit agreements with you or clearly intends to vouch for the completeness or correctness of information or content. BAADER reserves the right to change or update the information on its websites at any time without prior warning. This also applies to improvements and/or changes to the described products.

BAADER's obligations in terms of products and services are limited exclusively to the contractually agreed scope in each case. The BAADER websites do not contain any guarantee of properties or warranties of any kind.

We are liable for third-party content according to the statutory provisions. Insofar as a link gives access to third-party websites, we draw attention to the fact that we have no influence on the content and structure of third-party websites, and do not claim their content as our own.

Security warning

You are responsible for ensuring that the applications you use to access the BAADER websites are free of viruses. Use of the internet is involved with risks resulting from public access and the possibility of unauthorised third-party influence on the contents, and you have accepted these risks by using the internet. BAADER is not liable for any damage resulting from the realisation of these risks when using the BAADER websites or any linked website, unless BAADER is responsible for the risk and its realisation. In particular BAADER is not liable for stoppages or any loss of programs or other data in your IT systems.

Governing law

All legal transactions resulting from and in the context of using the BAADER websites are subject to German law, precluding the UN Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods.

Data protection warning

Personal data disclosed in using the BAADER websites are collected, processed and used in compliance with the German data protection regulations and protecting your protectable concerns. We only use your data for advertising purposes if you have given your explicit corresponding consent.

Links to other websites

BAADERS websites contain links to other websites. BAADER is not responsible for the privacy practices or the content of other websites.